

LOLABRICKIDA THEATRE

Lolabrickida Theatre is a new theatre company in Saskatoon, SK. Founder, Laura Negraeff, has nearly a decade of experience directing, producing, and performing in professional and community theatres throughout Saskatchewan. Lolabrickida is a play on the name of a Flintstones character who quits her job after tiring of the loud incessant singing of her boss, Fred. Lolabrickida (or Lola for short) became a nickname given to Laura Negraeff by her dad and a playful reminder to find humour and joy among the chaos of life. Lolabrickida Theatre is committed to creating theatre with heart and helping to expand the kinds of stories that are told on Saskatchewan stages.

by Sarah Ruhl

This Pulitzer Prize Finalist and Tony Awards® nominated play explores relationships, women's health, motherhood, and much more. Set in the 1880s, the story primarily follows Dr. Givings, a physician who uses a new electrical device to treat "hysteria" in women. As his patients experience newfound sensations and connections, the play navigates themes of intimacy, sexuality, and gender roles within Victorian society. It is a funny, thought-provoking, and heartfelt show that illuminates how our society has progressed, regressed, and is still struggling to navigate the complications of gender, mental health, and marriage in today's world.
